Nixon 'swinger,' says Negro

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "You're a pretty swinging guy," said the young Negro in the blue turtleneck shirt.

"I always try to shoot straight," responded former vice president Richard M. Nixon after ending a quick political trip Tuesday into Philadelphia to learn more, he said, about the problems in the big cities: of jobs, racism, black capitalism, education.

Dr. Evan C. Reese, East Stroudsburg, Monroe County Republican chairman, attended the meeting.

Nixon, confident he's got the Republican presidential nomination locked up and that his Democratic opponent will be Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, said he must do well in the urban centers—places he lost in 1960 to John F. Kennedy—if he's to win in November.

Nixon said he's "putting special emphasis" on Philadelphia which went Democratic by 331,000 votes in 1960, making him lose Pennsylvania by 161,000.

Besides talking privately for about two hours with a group of 25 Negro and white civic leaders—"a very impressive bunch," he said—Nixon also met with Pennsylvania GOP convention delegates.

There were 23 of the 64 delegates present, many of them supporting his chief rival for the nomination, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York.

An Associated Press poll shows Nixon has 11 state delegates, with 49 for Rockefeller, including Gov. Raymond P. Shafer and former Gov. William W. Scranton.

Scranton showed up at the luncheon Tuesday, saying he "was invited and I came to say hello to an old friend."

Also present was former Gov. John S. Fine who said: "I'm still uncommitted."

Nixon told newsmen he didn't come to try to change any delegate votes—"it was all very friendly, without any arm-twisting"—and there was no indication that he did.

But he was enthusiastic about the cordiality shown, even by those who presently are not on his team.

"What I liked was the determination to get together after the convention," he said. "A great spirit came out of the meetings. I am sure I will have the support of every Republican now supporting someone else."

He said Shafer would be a strong campaigner for the entire Republican ticket this fall "when we go out to prove that it's the people, not the polls, that run this country."

Gus Lacy, the guy in the turtleneck, came with Stanley Branche, executive director of the militant Black Coalition. Both made it clear they were interested only in what Nixon was going to do "about white racism."

"I didn't really get an answer," said Branche. "But I was impressed. He leveled. This is a guy who wants a pretty big job, but really he's no bigger a celebrity to me than George Wallace, or Lyndon Johnson, or Hubert Humphrey, or any of those other white folks."

Ray quits fight against extradition

LONDON (AP) — James Earl Ray gave up his battle against extradition Tuesday and agreed to return to the United States for trial on charges of assassinating Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

He is expected to fly home under heavy guard in the next few days for trial in Memphis, Tenn., in the shooting of the Nobel laureate there last April 4. Ray, an escaped convict from the Missouri State Penitentiary, was arrested in London June 8. He has steadily claimed his innocence of the killing.

A legal informant said Ray signed a statement declaring he would not pursue an appeal in the British High Court against a Magistrate's Court order July 2 extraditing him to the United States.

The statement, signed Tuesday morning at a conference with his court-appointed British lawyer, cut short a complicated legal case which had little chance of success.

Heat wave to continue

Temperatures soar over 100

By BOB GROFF

POCONO RECORD REPORTER
STROUDSBURG — Willed collars was the "order of the day," and windowshoppers were few and far between on Main Street in downtown Stroudsburg on Tuesday.

Sidewalks seemed almost deserted as shoppers and visitors in the downtown area sought shelter from the July heatwave in the air conditioned stores, restaurants, and other places of business.

(Weather pattern, page 8.)

At 3 p.m. Tuesday, The Record took a survey of temperatures throughout the local area. The results were somewhat withering.

Bill Hagerty, United States Weather Bureau observer in Neola, recorded an official high of 92 degrees, but some unofficial readings were much higher.

The Frank Buck Esso Service Center at 3rd and McCannel, Stroudsburg, had a temperature reading of 110. Earlier in the day, at 11 a.m., the same station had a reading of 125.

Joe's luncheonette and Esso Station in Brodheadsville had a reading of 106. Serfess' Gulf Station, Washington and S. Courtland, East Stroudsburg, had a reading of 101 degrees.

The "coolest" of the four locations called was in Marshalls Creek. Huffman's Store reported a mere 100 at 3 p.m.

The Record's highest reading was 100, also at 3 p.m.

According to the U.S. Weather Bureau at Avoca Airport, area residents are in store for more of the same kind of weather for the next "several" days.

The extreme heat has brought along the usual uncomfortable feelings which affected nearly everyone. It has even gotten to the point where some local golfers seriously debate the sensibility of attacking the links. For those who do not know any dedicated golfers, this means it is extremely hot.

However, more serious problems also come with the high temperatures. These problems affect both people and agriculture.

Nuclear arms containment fateful, LBJ maintains

GENEVA (AP) — President Johnson told the opening session of the 17-nation disarmament conference Tuesday that "the fate of mankind" may depend upon the way the United States and the Soviet Union face their responsibility to prevent a nuclear arms race.

In a message to the conference, Johnson made clear the United States was eager to take up a Soviet proposal for mutual discussions on limiting strategic and defense nuclear weapons systems, including the antimissile missile.

Soviet Delegate Alexei A. Roshchin agreed on the importance of discussions but disappointed Western officials by insisting on priority for an international convention banning the use of nuclear weapons. The West feels such a convention could not be enforced.

Johnson said it is expected that the United States and the Soviet Union "will shortly reach a decision on the time and place for talks" on limiting nuclear weapons systems.

"The United States," he said, "would be prepared to consider reductions in existing systems. This would cut back effectively — and for the first time — on the vast potentials for destruction which each side possesses."

Without an agreement, he continued, "the nuclear arms race could escalate to new levels."

There was no immediate Soviet reaction.

Czech seeks Soviet help

VIENNA (AP) — Antonin Novotny, the stiff-necked Stalinist ousted from power by Czechoslovakia's liberal reformers, has made two secret trips to Moscow recently to plead for Soviet help in returning the country to orthodox communism, reliable informants reported Tuesday.

Their account, which could not be confirmed, coincided with growing concern in Prague that the Soviets and their East bloc allies were demanding the resignation of some liberal Czechoslovak leaders. The demand was expected to come in a letter to the Prague regime from the five hard-line Communist nations that virtually surround Czechoslovakia.

AP correspondent Peter Rehak reported from the Czechoslovak capital that this pressure was mounted while Czechoslovak intelligence officers were acknowledging Tuesday that only 2,500 of the 16,000 Soviet troops moved into the country for maneuvers in June had left.

Postal commission wants giant service run like business

WASHINGTON (AP) — A commission named by President Johnson recommended Tuesday that the nation's faltering, deficit-ridden mail service be turned over to a federal corporation patterned after private enterprise.

Such a move would eliminate the Cabinet-level Post Office Department—something the commission said is essential if the mails are to be operated on an efficient pay-as-you-go basis.

Presenting to Johnson a 212-page package of revolutionary ideas, the Commission on Postal Organization also broached three other major recommendations:

—Elimination of all political patronage jobs from the postal system.

—Fixing of mail rates by executives of the proposed corporation, subject only to veto by Congress.

—Introduction of true collective bargaining to determine compensation for postal workers, now largely decided by Congress.

Johnson did not endorse the findings of the blue ribbon panel. He simply said in a statement, "this report should be widely read and studied" and promised an early review of the document within the executive branch. Postmaster General W. Marvin Watson said he will head up such a study within his department.

In any event, legislation to carry out the proposals hardly could be expected to reach Congress until a new administration takes office next January.

Heading the commission, which worked more than a year, was Frederick R. Kappel, retired board chairman of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"The United States Post Office faces a crisis," the report began. "Each year it slips further behind the rest of the economy in service, in efficiency and in meeting its responsibilities as an employer. Each year it operates at a huge financial loss."

The commissioners, indicting the way the department operates, said the most frequent complaint is of undependable service.

"Delayed letters, erroneous deliveries, damaged parcels and lost magazines are everyday experiences," it said.

The panel accused the department of following antiquated personnel practices that it said discourage promotions on the basis of merit, said supervision is inadequate and that working conditions in many post offices are "appalling."

Noting that the postal deficit now tops $1.1 billion a year, it said it estimated that well over a billion dollars annually "would be saved if the post office management were freed to plan and finance postal operations and capital investment strictly in accord with postal needs."

The proposed federal corporation would be run by six part-time directors, to be named by the president and confirmed by the Senate, plus three board-appointed executives who would themselves become directors. One of the three would be chief executive officer, another would handle day-to-day operations, and the third more than likely would be an expert in financial matters.

Canadian postal strike nears

OTTAWA (AP)—A nationwide postal strike set for 5 a.m. EDT Thursday is already putting a crimp in Canada's mail service.

Post offices are under orders not to forward out-of-town letters or daily newspapers mailed after 5 p.m. Tuesday or local letters mailed after midnight.

The Post Office Department has notified foreign countries with which it has mail agreements of the impending suspension of service in Canada.

Fortas defends LBJ association

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Abe Fortas publicly acknowledged Tuesday that while serving on the Supreme Court he assisted President Johnson in White House conferences on Vietnam and civil disorders in the United States.

But he also told the Senate Judiciary Committee his role was simply that of summarizing for the President what others had said.

"It would be very misleading to allow the impression to prevail that this is a matter of frequency," Fortas said.

"It occurs very seldom and it has occurred only in matters that are very perplexing and that are critical in importance to the President and he wants some additional assistance."

Fortas told the committee that "whatever opportunity I have to serve my country" in this manner will end next Jan. 20. This was a reference to the date on which Johnson's term will end.

Fortas appeared before the committee to testify on his nomination to be chief justice of the United States. He is the first nominee for that office to be quizzed by a congressional committee.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., leading a fight against Fortas's confirmation, urged the committee last week to look into reports that Fortas is playing a big role in White House policymaking.

Griffin criticized Fortas's White House role in an impromptu news conference outside the hearing room.

Griffin charged, "It breaches the basic fundamental concept of separation of power or at least brings it into question."

House defeats gun control bill

HARRISBURG (AP) — A strict gun control proposal, backed by the Shafer administration, went down to defeat in the House Tuesday after four hours of heated debate.

The legislation was offered as an amendment to a Senate-passed bill seeking to restrict the carrying of firearms on public streets and property during times of civil emergency.

The amendment fell, 58-133, and the bill itself was beaten, 78-112. Opponents said the legislation would have infringed on the constitutional rights of citizens to bear arms.

The amendment, far more encompassing than the bill, would have required that all gun users secure permits from the State Police and that all handguns be registered.

House Democratic Leader Herbert Fineman of Philadelphia and Rep. John S. Renninger, R-Bucks, offered the amendment in a bipartisan plea for tighter regulations on gun ownership.

Under the Fineman-Renninger proposal, the State Police would have been authorized to deny a gun permit to a drug addict, alcoholic, anyone with a mental disability or someone who had been convicted of a crime of violence.

"It will help to accomplish the difficult feat of keeping deadly weapons from those persons in whose hands a gun is a threat to themselves and to others," Fineman said in a floor speech.

Opponents disagreed, contending that the strict licensing and registration procedures would

Sen. Sam Ervin questions Fortas

Griffin indicated he would proceed with plans for a Senate filibuster against confirmation.

Fortas is an old friend of Johnson and long was legal adviser to the Johnson family. Griffin has called the justice a presidential "crony" and said continued contacts could breach the line separating the branches of government.

The questioning got quickly to this issue.

"I don't believe," Fortas said, "that I have at any time since I have been a justice of the Supreme Court recommended anybody for any position."

U.S. troops defeat Reds in fierce battle near Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. troops protecting the southern approach to Saigon defeated a large enemy force Tuesday in a savage battle in the Mekong Delta.

U.S. and South Vietnamese sources agreed that the enemy had pulled back around Saigon, easing a threat to the capital. But the fighting since Monday in the delta showed the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese still were in force on the city's approaches.

Infantrymen of the U.S. 9th Division struck the enemy force 16 miles southeast of Saigon Monday and the battle raged on until the early morning hours of Tuesday.

Artillery, helicopter gunships and dive bombers joined the battle. U.S. spokesmen said 76 enemy troops were killed while the Americans lost seven dead and 21 wounded.

The toll of enemy dead in another battle Monday 40 miles deeper in the delta was raised from 104 to 115.

In this fighting, about 1,000 U.S. 9th Division troops and more than 1,000 South Vietnamese cornered a large enemy force near the provincial capital of Phu Vinh. U.S. Navy gunboats, along with artillery and warplanes, were thrown into the battle. Allied casualties were given as 17 Americans and two South Vietnamese wounded.

The two battles constituted the heaviest fighting in several weeks, during which there has been a general lull in South Vietnam.

While the threat to Saigon was reported eased, U.S. sources did not discount the possibility of a sudden attack, noting that enemy strategy calls for the greatest possible use of surprise.

None believes that the enemy has given up his aim to strike a blow at Saigon to embarrass the South Vietnamese government and to strengthen North Vietnam's hand at the peace talks with the United States in Paris.

U.S. Air Force B52 bombers carried out seven strikes Monday and early Tuesday, ranging from near the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon through the central highlands and into North Vietnam.

Two raids were made in the North, one 30 miles and the other 35 miles southeast of Dong Hoi. The targets were truck parks, supply areas, anti-aircraft gun sites and artillery positions.

Elsewhere over the North Vietnamese panhandle, U.S. fighter-bombers flew 120 strike missions Monday. A communique said "lines of communication and weapons sites continued to be the primary targets."

U.S. headquarters also announced an Air Force F105 Thunderchief was lost to enemy ground fire during strikes Sunday northwest of Dong Hoi.

The pilot was picked up Monday by a rescue helicopter. It was the 866th announced loss of

Carbon phone firm acquired

ELYRIA, Ohio (AP) — Mid-Continent Telephone Corp. announced Tuesday it has acquired Carbon Telephone Co. of Lansford, Pa.

Herman W. Riebe, Mid-Continent president, said Carbon Telephone will be acquired for an exchange of stock.

He said the company will become the seventh Pennsylvania operating telephone company in the Mid-Continent system.

The Carbon Co. has more than 6,205 customers in the communities of Lansford, Summit Hill and Coaldale and covers a 40-square mile territory.

a U.S. plane in combat over the North in the war.

It also was disclosed that an Air Force F100 Super Sabre Jet was brought down Sunday by ground fire southwest of Hue in South Vietnam. The pilot was killed.

While the war ground on, secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford went through a round of meetings with U.S. and South Vietnamese officials on the military situation. He will go to Honolulu later this week for a meeting between President Johnson and President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Clifford spent about three hours with Thieu. He told him that Johnson was looking forward to seeing him in Honolulu. The Saigon Post said Thieu would leave for Honolulu Thursday, indicating the conferences will be held Friday and Saturday.

There was no official confirmation. The only date announced either here or in Washington is that the meeting would be around July 20.

Bruno nominated to court

HARRISBURG (AP) — Joseph C. Bruno, who ran unsuccessfully as the Republican nominee for State Superior Court in 1964, was nominated Tuesday as judge of the 1st District Philadelphia County Court.

If the State Senate confirms Gov. Shafer's nomination of Bruno, he would serve until the first Monday of January, 1970, replacing Judge Joseph L. McGlynn, who resigned.

Gov. Shafer also sent to the Senate the nomination of Richard T. Wentley of Pittsburgh as judge of the juvenile court of the 5th Circuit composed of Allegheny County.

Wentley would fill a vacancy created by the retirement of Judge Bennett Rodgers, the term extending to January of 1971.

Irwin Rubin of Philadelphia and Joseph W. Kettering of Elizabethtown were nominated for membership on the State Board of Public Accountant Examiners.

GSA halts planning for parking area

HARRISBURG (AP) — The General State Authority agreed Tuesday to postpone construction of a multi-level parking garage in the capital park area of Harrisburg.

The authority acted on a report by Perrin C. Hamilton, secretary of property and supplies, and Budget Secretary Arthur Sampson, who were appointed by the governor last month to study the project.

In their report, Hamilton and Sampson noted that construction of the facility by the state would conflict with the long-range planning designated for the area by the city of Harrisburg.

GSA plans to demolish two buildings now occupying the site — the YMCA and a church — and blacktop the area for parking until joint plans with city are decided upon.

Philadelphia police hunt for cop killer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police were at a loss Tuesday to explain the disappearance of an accused narcotics user charged in the fatal shooting of Philadelphia policeman Ross F. Brackett.

More than 200 detectives spread out over the city in a massive manhunt for Phillip (Sad Sack) Clark, 27, a Negro, charged with murder in a warrant issued Monday at 8:30 p.m. — 12 hours after Brackett was shot.

The 25-year-old Brackett was shot — apparently with his own service revolver — after he scuffled on a West Philadelphia sidewalk with a robbery suspect he had overtaken in a foot chase.

The white patrolman's revolver was found later in a yard two doors from Clark's home. The pistol had five spent shells and one live round in it.

Police checked out dozens of leads Tuesday but no trace of Clark was turned up.

"We believe he's holed up somewhere in the city," said Capt. Thomas O'Neill, in charge of the homicide division.

"He's a small-timer," said one ranking police official. "He wouldn't know how to go about getting away. Besides, he has a narcotics habit. He couldn't leave here and still get junk."

Records show Clark was arrested four times on narcotics charges between September, 1964, and May, 1967.

New coal mine, railroad start
MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — A new mine produced its first coal Tuesday, and the 7,000-ton output made up the first train over a new railroad.
The mine is the Federal No. 2 operation of Eastern Associated Coal Corp. at Miracle Run, West of Morgantown. The mine started production with about 100 employees, but eventually will employ 450 to 500.
The railroad is the Wayneburg Southern, a 35-mile line.

Officials take tour

Gypsy moth 'work' viewed

STROUDSBURG — An aerial and ground survey of state forests near the Berks-Schuylkill county line was made Tuesday by a group of 15 local and area officials to examine severe defoliation of trees by an undetected infestation of the "gypsy moth."

The survey was a local follow-up of a recent examination made by officials of the state department of agriculture and a survey taken last Thursday by John Withrow, Monroe County cooperative extension agent and Foster Blair, executive director, Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce.

Personal observations were made by: Monroe County commissioners, Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, Arlington Martin and Elwood Hintze; Frank Dressler, executive director of TIRAC; Robert Uguccioni and Peter Ahnert, Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau; Marshall Reese and Jay Snyder, Monroe County Planning Commission; Ralph Reppert, Pocono Mountains Industry; Francis Drake, First Stroudsburg National Bank; George Learn and Ralph Shupp, Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs; George Schardt and James Miller of Hemlock Farms.

The representatives were briefed on the immediate problem in the area and general information on the gypsy moth by Henry Nixon, director of the Bureau of Plant Industry in Harrisburg assisted by entomologist Mrs. Judy Bachtle.

The area is located on an isolated ridge in the vicinity of Auburn and Deer Lake in Schuylkill County. This newest infestation escaped detection because it is about two miles beyond the western boundary of the gypsy moth trapping zone.

Hardwood trees were completely defoliated, the hemlocks stripped of the needles and mountain laurel attacked by the insects.

Gypsy moth larvae were so numerous that investigators found it necessary to check their clothing before leaving the area as a precaution against carrying insects elsewhere.

Infestation was generally confined to the Pocono Mountain areas in the eastern counties. The trapping zone then was established in adjacent counties to check on possible westward movement of the insect, Nixon told local representatives.

The recent infested site is also 10 miles west of Hawk Mountain Bird Sanctuary where severe damage by the insect was discovered in the summer of 1967.

The expanded trapping zone revealed that the gypsy moths have now traveled some 50 miles farther west than any had been found before.

The newest infestation apparently has been building up for some time, according to Nixon. It escaped detection in the annual gypsy moth trapping season because it was beyond the western boundary of the established zone.

Nothing can be done at this time. It is too late to spray since the insect is moving from the larvae to the pupa stage and will be inactive until next spring.

But it certainly serves as evidence of the damage that can be done by the gypsy moth when no control program is in effect. As a consequence, it serves as an example of what can happen, Nixon said.

Only time will tell the full extent of the damage to this defoliated area. In a few weeks, many of the trees will put on a second set of leaves. Defoliation, however, weakens the trees and if repeated over a few seasons will kill many species of trees.

A hearing on the gypsy moth control spraying is scheduled in Harrisburg before a special appointed senate committee on July 29 and 30. Nixon requested Frank Dressler to attend the hearing which has been prompted by recent controversial cases against the use of insecticides as a control measure.

"This is bad; this is really bad," Uguccioni said in his observation, "and we don't want any part of this in the Poconos." Uguccioni, as executive director of PMVB said he would support any measures under the state department for means of control or even eradication. This is an immediate problem, Uguccioni said and the side effects of the spraying is secondary.

Marshall Reese, as chairman of the county planning commission suggested a public information program on the gypsy moth, especially for sportsmen who would then recognize any infested area that has remained undetected such as this one and notify authorities.

secretary, Mrs. John Kramer. Leonard Snyder, Delaware Township, who was awarded several contracts for work on public buildings in the county earlier this month conferred with the board in regard to the work to be performed.

All three commissioners, chairman Jay Schroeder, and members Warner M. DePuy, and George Counts, were present for the semi-monthly meeting.

The meeting was an abbreviated one since there was little official business to transact.

CANADENSIS — A van truck caught fire Monday at 2:15 p.m. in front of the Robert Quinn home on Seese Hill Rd. Canadensis.

Barrett Twp. firemen responded but their services were not required as the fire was out on arrival.

Fire Chief Charles Ayers said the fire was probably caused by a backfire through the truck's carburetor.

The truck is owned by James Walters.

Pocono Mountains number one

The Pocono Mountains have replaced Niagara Falls as the number one honeymoon center in the United States.

We make this statement this morning on the finding of no less an authority than J. Ross Kenzie, manager of the Visitors and Convention Bureau of Niagara Falls, Canada.

This bit of information comes as no surprise to anyone, as the Poconos have more to offer honeymooners and tourists than any other resort location in the east.

The success enjoyed in the Poconos apparently stems from location, facilities and planning. The entire stay in the region is well planned and nothing left to chance — with the possible exception of weather. In fact, we find the weatherman most cooperative over any given year.

However, the fact that Niagara Falls now accepts second place to the Poconos is not so much a credit to this area, but rather a challenge. It's like a baseball pennant race or playing "King on the Hill." The Poconos are now the target of every other resort area in the United States.

Instead of taking bows for a job well done, we should be planning for the future, as officials in the area are, with a goal to keep our area the number one attraction.

Keeping the Poconos on the top isn't going to be easy. It's going to require a strong combined effort by all resort owners and resort workers. Residents of the area must also do all in their power to maintain the beauty of the Poconos, which is basically the major item of attraction for visitors.

Cleanliness and planning and zoning in the area will do much to guard our rating as the number one resort area in the east and the top honeymoon haven in the United States.

We are number one right now — let's stay that way.

Center of arts

Another gigantic step toward exposing the Pocono Mountains to the arts was taken on Sunday when it was revealed that the Pocono Arts Center has purchased Camp Wyomissing and an adjoining farm in Minisink Hills.

The entire purchase was made for a reported $208,000 and the future calls for the presentation of arts, from music to the theater, like it has never been seen in this region previously.

A pavilion will be constructed at Camp Wyomissing and in future years will, according to plans, be the foundation for some of the best artists of their time.

Among the features will be an annual presentation by the famed Philadelphia Orchestra, and appearances of the Pittsburgh Symphony and the Pennsylvania Ballet.

Right now the Pocono Arts Group is currently attempting to raise one million dollars in an effort to see the organization's dreams come true.

The camp consists of 112 acres and 39 buildings and the adjoining property is listed as 75 acres. The camp was purchased from the Big Brothers Assn. of Philadelphia.

There is a 400-seat theater now on the premises and is currently being used by a theater group. Other buildings at the camp will be used by various study groups, for which instructors were previously announced.

The board of directors features outstanding figures in music and art from the eastern section of the United States and the operation appears to have favorable backing.

However, like anything else, the Poconos must show their appreciation if the entire venture is to be successful.

A schoolteacher took her first assignment in a hidebound Republican town in Maine. One afternoon she was stopped on the street by one of the school board members.

"Miss Jones," he said deferentially, "I hope you won't take this as an offense but folks are saying you are seeing a lot of Jabez Jenkins lately."

"Why, Mr. Purdy," the teacher replied, astonished, "Mr. Jenkins is 80 years old and a perfect gentleman."

The board member shook his head.

"Miss Jones, you don't seem to understand. That man is a Democrat."

Change of attitude

Edward Kennedy being connected with Humphrey prexy ticket

By MATTHEW V. STORIN
Record Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — While Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) nears the close of a period of personal mourning after the assassination of his brother, some close friends and advisers are significantly changing their attitudes about what the senator should do in this election year.

In the first month days after the death of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D-N.Y.), these people expected and hoped that Ted Kennedy would eventually return to the senate and eschew any national politicking this year.

Now they talk of the leverage Kennedy might have in steering Democratic front-runner Hubert H. Humphrey toward a new stance on the Vietnam issue. And they talk of how strongly Sen. Kennedy feels against the war, a fact not widely appreciated because of the overshadowing views of his brother.

Not biting

Jim Bishop

Modern thinking?

WANTED: Slick salesman who can sell religion. Must be well-dressed and patient. Need sincere tone. Help to find out where we lost God, or vice versa. No experience necessary.

He was 15 years old, tall and slender, the turtle-neck sweater and sports jacket well-draped on the frame. One hand was in a trouser pocket and he smiled apologetically. "My father said I must obey the law," he said. "Why? Give me one reason why I have to be good."

I could have slapped the friendly face. It would have proved nothing, except that he had me boxed. "I mean," he said in that superior high school manner, "assuming that I can get away with it." Assuming that I can get away with it. . . . Assuming. . . .

"How about church?" I said. "Doesn't your church teach you that good is preferable to evil? That evil will be punished?" The smile faded. He seemed sorry for me. "Mr. Bishop," he said. "I don't believe in Santa anymore. My people don't go to church. They belong, but they don't go."

He told me that, though he wasn't old enough to drive, he saw nothing wrong with stealing a car, provided a fellow "used his head." He would seduce any date, if she would listen to his eloquence. "If I could steal a million from a bank, and serve five or 10 years for it, wouldn't I be a fool not to do it at my age?"

Anybody want to debate this kid? I got nowhere. There is a new philosophy abroad. It is purely materialistic. "Do unto him before he does it unto you." Felonies are up 83 per cent in the United States, and this boy, plus 10 million more like him, are the ones responsible for the huge wave of lawlessness. Look at the national statistics and you will find that junior is our major bandit.

The number of policemen per thousand population has jumped, but crime jumps higher. The youngster's argument seems to be that merely stating that something is wrong is not enough to turn him away from it.

We talked a little more. He had my wheels whizzing. When I was a boy there were several reasons why I resisted crime: One was that my personal pride couldn't stand the public disgrace and confinement. Another was that my father carried a careless fist. The third was that my church taught me that God sees all, and that I would always have to reckon with Him.

What is boyhood like now? I don't know. This youngster had a fear of being caught. His ambition is to outwit the law. He doesn't fear his Dad: "He wouldn't hit me, mister. My father would bail me out." The third reason — God and judgement — amuses him. "I don't believe in Santa," he said.

That night, I took the research books on religion from the shelves. In 1850, 16 per cent of Americans belonged to a church or temple.

In 1965, the figure was 64.3 per cent. God has become big business indeed. The only thing that my young friend would concede is that God is non-taxable.

Is it possible that we go to church or temple through habit? Is God getting a dial tone when He tries to speak to us? Something is wrong. There are 130,000,000 Americans who belong to a faith. This makes our country a leader in two categories: Religion and Crime. They were once incompatible.

Many of the older clerics fail us. They preach listening. Some have become computers of the collection. They enunciate the rights from the wrongs with the imperturbability of baseball umpires. A few could stand a test of faith.

I think that a young man like this one might be law-abiding if he had a moral crutch. Obviously, his conscience is dormant. He has one, but the kid doesn't know it.

Walking back up Tamarind Drive, he looked like any mannerly boy. The crime statistics published by J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI would indicate that there are millions of kids like this one. In a tight spot, they are dangerous. They kill, then cry.

Another thing I'm a square: he knows it. He's a B-plus student; a fair dancer; a young man who appears to be at peace with himself. If the things he tells me are true, he may be Resting in Peace somewhere in a few years. . . .

These people are not about to urge Sen. Kennedy to run on a national ticket. But they do feel that the senator may very well keep his options open as long as possible with regard to endorsing a candidate or taking a possible vice presidential opportunity. The prime reason would be the war issue.

There is general agreement among these advisers that were it not for the pressing war issue and the prospects for a possible victory by Republican Richard M. Nixon in the November election, Kennedy would prefer to return to the senate.

Kennedy feels intensely enough on the war to be convinced that United States escalation has caused more civilian casualties in South Vietnam alone. And, largely through his late brother, he knows far more about missed or bungled opportunities for peace than anything that has been widely published.

One reason Sen. Edward Kennedy accepted Sen. Robert Kennedy's decision to run for president was his brother's knowledge, from sources inside and outside the administration, about the U.S. government's conduct of the war.

Though Sen. Kennedy has busied himself with family affairs in recent weeks, it is significant that he did authorize the release of a highly critical report by his subcommittee which has investigated administration programs for the care of Vietnamese civilian casualties and refugees.

It is not a report that Hubert Humphrey, in his present manner of discussing the war, could abide.

The document is harshly skeptical about U.S. efforts to win the hearts and minds of the South Vietnamese population. It is only the latest of many efforts by the Massachusetts senator over the past three years to change the administration's civilian program in Vietnam.

Quiet effort
In discussing Kennedy and Humphrey in 1968, it is perhaps well to remember that for many months the senator conducted this effort quietly through conferences with administration officials. It was consistent with a "results count" philosophy which Kennedy has often mentioned to friends when discussing his senate career.

It is the people who know all this about the senator who are now expecting him to effect a less passive role in this year's election than the one they envisioned in the early weeks of June.

Meantime, despite published reports to the contrary, the senator's staff insisted this past week that Kennedy has not made any political decisions since the death of his brother. "He hasn't discussed these things and when people bring them up he just changes the subject. He hasn't closed off any options, therefore," one of the senator's closest associates said.

All the senator has indicated, they say, is that he is prepared to continue in public life and prepared to make, in a matter of weeks, those key decisions which the U.S. political structure will demand of him.

One of those decisions will involve Vietnam and what he can do about future U.S. policy there.

Robert S. Allen

Allen - Goldsmith Report

Disruption of campaign

John A. Goldsmith

WASHINGTON — Vice President Humphrey's top aides are increasingly fearful that protests and campaign picketing thus far are only a mild prelude to massive efforts aimed at disrupting and discrediting the Democratic National Convention.

From bits and pieces of information, collected across the nation, they are convinced that campaign strategists for Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy already are engineering much of the demonstrating against the Vice President's campaign appearances.

They think some McCarthy supporters, privately convinced that Humphrey will win the presidential nomination, would like to make a nationally televised shambles of the Democratic Convention as a step toward forming a "peace" party.

That is the background for Humphrey's recent plea that all candidates join in repudiating "abusive tactics" which are, he said, "so characteristic of totalitarian politics."

"History is strewn with the tangled wreckage left by militant minorities — each of which thought it had cornered the market in social justice and virtue, and had discovered the true belief to the exclusion of all others," Humphrey said in a speech at Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Humphrey spokesmen do not accuse McCarthy, personally, of engineering disruptive anti-Humphrey protests which have marred the vice president's campaign. They say the senator may well have been insulated from "low road" campaigning by some of his supporters.

The Vice President's aides complain, however, that while McCarthy charges Humphrey liutenants with supporting undemocratic processes in the selection of convention delegates, his own liutenants seem to be setting the stage for activities aimed at frustrating the convention's democratic process.

Causing major concern in the Humphrey high command is the possible evolution of anti-Humphrey campaign protests into large-scale anti-war demonstrations at the convention by youthful McCarthy supporters.

Here are some of the incidents which have, been under careful study by Humphrey's campaign headquarters:

Philadelphia — Humphrey was subjected to a noisy demonstration when he spoke at a supposedly non-political July 4th celebration at Independence Hall. The Humphrey staff has obtained copies of an advance handbill issued by "McCarthy volunteers" which urged McCarthy supporters to go to Independence Hall and show Humphrey that "we want independence from the Johnson Administration."

Cleveland — The vice president was picketed in the course of a campaign visit to the city's Hough area. His staff is now convinced that the demonstration was planned by pro-McCarthy outsiders. Humphrey workers began making inquiries when they noticed, in the admittedly sparse crowds, that anti-Humphrey pickets in mostly Negro Hough were mostly white.

Los Angeles — A major anti-Humphrey demonstration had been planned for last Wednesday night, when Humphrey was unable to keep a speaking engagement at the Hollywood Palladium. About 2,000 anti-war demonstrators marched near the Palladium when Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., substituted for the ailing Humphrey. Aides are sure McCarthy supporters helped the "peace action council" in planning the protest.

Chicago — Anti-Humphrey efforts are already being planned in the convention city. Rev. John R. Fry, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, has urged that "massive waves" of young people storm the national convention in support of McCarthy's nomination. Fry is the clergyman who has been under fire at hearings of a Senate subcommittee which has been investigating activities of the "Blackstone Rangers" gang in connection with an anti-poverty program.

Humphrey aides take little comfort in elaborate security measures such as those planned for the convention hall by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley. With the convention city saturated with newsmen and TV cameras, they think an unruly anti-Humphrey demonstration would harm the convention image even if it was miles from the convention hall.

Other concerns
Apprehensions of the Humphrey forces are not confined to the possibility of protests and demonstrations. Aides are also concerned about a wide variety of steps which might frustrate — and thus discredit — the operation of the convention and tarnish its nominee.

The matter of convention credentials and the seating of contested delegations is a case in point which has been researched by the Humphrey staff. Aides expect some protests against pro-Humphrey delegations. Their research indicates that they could successfully challenge pro-McCarthy delegates who have said they will not support Humphrey if nominated.

Such disputes, however, have in the past been settled by credentials committees made up of two delegates from each state and territory which has no credentials contest. Humphrey aides say they do not know just what would happen if a flood of challenges from a large number of states depleted and immobilized the credentials committee. They assume the convention, itself, would have to find a solution.

They are frankly fearful that the solution to such procedural fights, like demonstrations and protests, would not shape up well on television.

Your Health

Doctor, I'd like to know

My husband and I have annual checkups and our health has always been considered by our doctor as good. We enjoy sports, work hard, and our diet consists of plenty of steaks, fruits, vegetables and green salads. Yet we constantly seem to have colds, flu, sore throats. What would be the reason for our poor record when we obviously should be in good health?

Dear Mrs. C.: I, too, would be annoyed if I were "bugged" by such annoying conditions if I ate as well, worked as well and had no major illnesses.

Unfortunately, germs, bacteria of all kinds and viruses have no respect for people, regardless of social, intellectual and cultural attainment. Somehow they enjoy distributing themselves impartially amongst everybody.

It must be confessed that in a world that soon will send a man to the moon, jet propel hundreds of humans from New York to California in an hour, and transplant hearts and other organs, that it is distressing we still have not found adequate protection against the causes of the common cold. This idea reduces our vanity to nothing but must be faced as the truth. Actually, colds are passed from people to people at work and at play. The others who generously give their bugs to you may not even be bothered by colds as you are.

I don't believe that a family should take it as a personal insult if they are laid low for a few days by the flu and are spared really serious disorders.

You did not mention whether or not there are small children in the household. They frequently introduce new germs that soon make the rounds of everyone in the family. You will find that before long the frequency and severity of these colds will disappear if you maintain the excellence of your health record.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH — A simple first-aid kit in the back of every car makes it an "ambulance" for road emergencies.

These columns are designed to relieve your fears about health through a better understanding of your mind and body. All the hopeful new advances in medicine reported here are known to doctors everywhere.

Your individual medical problems should be handled by your own doctor. He knows you best.

Hard to understand

WASHINGTON — It is increasingly embarrassing to be a simple man in this complex age. For instance, great events constantly take place — causing celebration and jubilation in some quarters — and all I can think of are questions of the "Yes, but, . . ." variety.

Take, if you will, the recent mass signing of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. Now, I'm almost afraid to ask any obvious questions about it for one of two reasons: Either the brilliant minds who engineered it will give me answers I can't understand or, worse, they will have no answers at all, which will leave me feeling rather insecure.

Russia, the United States and England signed the treaty — agreeing not to pass out atomic weapons willy-nilly to any country that asks for them. That is all very good, of course, but what is the value of it when countries such as Red China, Germany and France did not sign it?

Of the five nations that have the bomb, two did not sign the treaty. In effect, what we've got is a three-fifths pact. And doesn't that defeat the whole purpose? It's like having a bulletproof helmet, which will protect you from everything except bullets. Yet our State Department officials are happy about the treaty. I must say they have more confidence in Red China, Germany and-or France than I do.

Another thing that makes our diplomats cheerful is the number of other nations that signed the treaty. Among the countries who agreed not to develop or "acquire" nuclear weapons are these:

Iceland, the Dominican Republic, Ghana, San Marino, Haiti, Cyprus, Botswana, Paraguay, El Salvador, Togo, Kenya, Mongolia, Chad, Somalia, Barbados, Dahomey and Afghanistan.

What a relief it is that El Salvador, which only lately discovered the tractor, has agreed not to rattle a nuclear saber.

Crackdown on checks

Law enforcement officials in this country have been under great criticism for not pursuing hard-core criminals. It's the old saw about policemen ticketing little old ladies for jaywalking, while their partner is helping a looter load a television set in his trunk.

This is absolutely not true. For the last five years, this country has seen one of the biggest crackdowns in the history of crime on the ruthless, white-collar check cashier. No holds have been barred to make sure the average citizen doesn't exchange his check for currency.

I thought all of you would sleep better tonight if you knew the security precautions against Sam and Prudence Forthright as they attempted to purchase a chaise longue at a catalogue center.

"Is that cash or charge?" asked the salesperson.

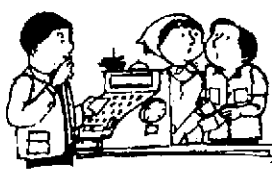

"I've written a check," said Sam.

The woman's eyes narrowed. "Is it your personal check?"

"Yes," said Sam.

Suspect in hand

The salesperson grabbed a microphone and called into it loudly, "Mr. Sims. We have a 'suspect' at the courtesy desk!" Sam and Prudence huddle close together.

The manager came up from behind. "All right now, just take it easy and no one will get hurt. This check is from a downtown bank. That's rather odd. There's a bank right around the corner from your home. Just what are you trying to pull, fella?"

"We bank by mail."

"Let's see your identification. Take out the cards from your billfold and lay them on the desk one by one. What are you holding back? Let's see it! The Washington Township Library."

You wanta tell me about the overdue books, or shall I call in a state trooper?"

"No really, mumbled Sam,

"I'm not holding back. Here's my driver's license, my credit cards, my last scorecard from Mini-Golf and a record of my Sabin oral polio vaccine booster."

"Bring them along," he snapped. "We want to photograph both of you."

Prudence held back. "I couldn't," she stammered. "I've got rollers in my hair and..."

Stay in town

"Maybe you want I should call my supervisor," snapped Mr. Sims. "Just stand still and hold your driver's license under your chin. Okay, go ahead and endorse it. Put your phone number under your signature..."

and Mr. Forthright, don't leave the city for a couple of days. ... know what I mean?"

Behind Sam and Prudence, a customer stepped up to the counter, flashed some green bills from his billfold and said, "I want to order a 22-caliber rifle with chrome-plated trigger, jam-proof action, that fires up to 19 rounds without reloading."

Mr. Sims smiled. "Did you see those two birds try to get away with cashing a check? In my business you learn which people to trust."

Sirhan's ordinary jail day

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 45-second ding-ding-ding from electric gongs on corridor walls awakens Prisoner No. 718486 at 6:30 a.m.

A small figure, underwired, rises from a narrow bunk hinged to the concrete wall. Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, the 24-year-old Jordanian charged with assassinating Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, starts another day of——Confinement with a guard in a 6-by-8 foot windowless cell on the 13th floor of the Civic Center's smog-grimed, 15-story Hall of Justice.

—Wearing standard Los Angeles County jail garb—blue denim pants and blue cotton shirt stenciled "L.A. Co. Jail," his name and booking number on a plastic band riveted around his left wrist.

—Reading newspapers he buys or books he orders from the jail library.

—Pacing a larger caged area outside his cell 20 minutes morning and afternoon.

—Eating candy bars ... smoking cigars ... hoping for visitors ... and, mostly, just waiting to be taken to an improvised 13th floor courtroom July 19 to plead guilty or not guilty.

Penn State sets horseshoe class

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — For the past three years, people from many walks of life have been learning how to make a four-footed animal's walk through life more comfortable.

Dentists, mechanics, a male model, truck drivers, teachers and college students have been among the 169 students who successfully completed Pennsylvania State University's summer course in horseshoeing.

With 150 applicants for this summer, the course has split into two sessions, running from July 29 to August 8, and August 12 to 23rd. There also will be an "advanced" course for post-graduates on Aug. 10.

Those enrolled in the course are not blacksmiths. They are for the most part equine enthusiasts or professionals — horseowners who want to give their animal's feet that personal touch, or horse trainers eager to expand knowledge of their trade.

What the students will be learning, basically, is how to fit what most people are used to throwing at a stake, on to the fibrous foot of a horse. And, according to the Penn State professor who oversees the program, shoeing a horse is not as easy as skinning a cat.

"Endurance and finesse is necessary, and a person has to be in good physical condition," said Dr. Thomas L. Merritt, associate professor of animal science and director of the course.

"What we aim to do here," said Dr. Merritt, "is to teach the basic skills and fundamentals and to provide the opportunity for practicing these skills."

Toward this end, the 10-day course divides into several stages. First, students are taught about the anatomy and physiology of a horse's foot.

"If they understand these things, then they can understand some of the principles of putting shoes on, which some blacksmiths do not understand," said Dr. Merritt.

Then the students shoe their first foot — but only one. They are given disembodied feet donated by a slaughterhouse. Presumably, these appendages are easier to manage than if they were attached to a 1,200 pound animal.

The students trim these feet with a "rasp" or special file. Then, taking a piece of straight steel, an anvil, a forge and a hammer, they shape their first horse shoe to tack on to the dead foot. It is important, Dr. Merritt emphasized, that the shoe be made to fit the foot. Otherwise, the horse suffers.

The third stage of the course permits students to shoe their first live animal at the Hanover Shoe Farm in Hanover.

The students spend a week on the farm, where they work with five horses, or 20 feet. They are taught how to make corrective shoes as well as shoes for everyday wear.

The population of Utah was 990,000 in 1965.

Ann Landers

In need of help

Dear Ann Landers: I'll come right to the point and not try to make excuses for myself. The plain truth is that I have been married for four years and I do not know how to make a decent cup of coffee.

I have blamed the pot, the water, the brand of coffee, and finally the stove. I have gone from percolator to drip to electric to the open pot method. I've tried nine different brands of coffee and have even bought coffee beans and ground them myself. The results are the same. Rotten coffee.

What is wrong with a woman who can bake a Danish torte and prepare baked Alaska but can't make a good cup of coffee?

HATE MYSELF
Dear Self: The simplest things are the ones that can drive a person nuts. I know how you feel. I can't make Jello.

I don't know what you are doing wrong, but perhaps some of the great coffee makers in my reading audience will come up with some homey hints. How about it, girls? If there's a coffee secret out there, please spill it.

Dear Ann Landers: What I have to say will apply to thousands of married children, not just our own. I hope I can express myself well enough so you will print my letter.

A few weeks before Christmas, our anniversary, Mother's Day, Father's Day, and so on, the phone calls start — first from the daughters, then the daughters-in-law. They all ask, "What can we buy you?"

Of course I can't tell them that what we really want is not for sale. An invitation to a family meal with everyday chatter would be more delicious than a seven-course banquet in the finest restaurant.

An offer to drive us to town once in a while so we wouldn't have to fight the heavy traffic and park in a lot of feed meters would be pure heaven. Even a 10-minute phone call that is not a request to babysit, but a call just to visit, would be a rare treat.

What a joy it would be if our children would ask us to join them at the theater one night, or the symphony, or a movie — just knowing they thought of us would be a gift.

I guess what I'm trying to say is thoughtfulness and consideration are the best gifts of all.

MARRIED 40 YEARS

Dear Ann Landers: I am in love with a married man. It all started innocently. When he told me he loved me, I knew I loved him, too. The third time we went out of town together he admitted he was married, so you see he is honest.

His marriage was a shotgun type. He never loved his wife and they have been living like brother and sister for two years. He decided to get a divorce a year before I came along. I want to marry this man but I don't want people to think I broke up his marriage. How can I protect my reputation?

MISS D.
Dear D.: If the marriage is dead and you don't want to be accused of killing it, don't hang around the corpse. Tell him when he's a free man to call you up. And don't hold your breath waiting for the phone to ring, Baby.

World Council invades Sweden

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Nearly 2,000 participants in the World Council of Churches assembly transformed Stockholm's city center into a huge place of worship Sunday with an open air service that included a dialogue in many tongues on social issues of the world.

The service opened with sun piercing dark clouds and ended with thunder, rain and a storm of hailstones the size of peas.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 4♥ 5♠
5♥ 6♠ Pass Pass
8♥ Pass Pass Dble

Opening lead — queen of spades.

A player who opens the bidding with one of a suit seldom finds that the opponents can make a slam, but that is precisely what happened in this deal.

East would have made six diamonds, and South judged his chances very accurately by bidding six hearts as a sacrifice. However, East deflected expectationally well to exact a fourtrick penalty.

He won the spade lead with the ace and underled the ace of diamonds in order to get a spade ruff. West won with the ten and returned a spade, East ruffing declarer's king with his singleton trump.

It was now clear to East, both from the bidding and the fall of the cards, that South's opening bid had consisted of the K-x of spades, six or seven hearts to the A-Q, probably a singleton diamond, and therefore three or four clubs to the king.

A diamond return was consequently out of the question, since it would give declarer a ruff and discard if, as seemed likely, West had raised diamonds with the K-10-x-x.

Faced with a compulsory club return, East had to decide which club to play. He chose the queen — an unusual play, no doubt — but it was the only card he could return to give defense two club tricks.

Declarer won with the king but had to lose two more tricks to go down four — 1,100 points.

Had East returned the ace instead of the queen of clubs, he would then have been forced to either lead another club away from the queen or yield a ruff and discard.

Similarly, had he returned a low club instead of the queen, declarer would simply follow low and again lose only one club trick.

The queen play could not cost a trick, and might — and in the actual case did — gain a 300-point trick.

You scoop out that ice cream and serve "as is" to the family. But when guests come, it's fun to make additions.

One interesting way to add to vanilla ice cream is to team it with chocolate-mint cordial. This is a comparative newcomer among cordials—and a delightful entry.

The simplest way of all to offer this combination is to turn scoops of vanilla ice cream into sherbet glasses, pour the chocolate-mint cordial into a decanter and pass it so each guest can help himself. No decanter? Then pass the cordial in its own bottle; it's done at the best tables.

If you have parfait glasses, you may want to pack the vanilla ice cream into them alternately with rosettes of whipped cream and cherries.

Another way to use the cordial is in a sauce. The sauce may be passed with ice cream in sherbet glasses or it may be spooned into parfait glasses alternately with the ice cream. Take your choice. This Chocolate Mint Sauce is velvety-smooth and rich, but it is semi-sweet rather than sweet. Because of this it will suit sophisticated tastes. Here's the recipe for the sauce:

Chocolate Mint Sauce
½ Cup (3 ounces) semi-sweet chocolate pieces

Company parfaits are made with vanilla ice cream and a chocolate sauce flavored with chocolate-mint cordial.

½ Cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon instant coffee
1 egg yolk
¼ cup chocolate-mint cordial

Into the top of a small double boiler, turn the chocolate and cream; over hot (not boiling) water, stir constantly until smoothly blended.

Add butter and instant coffee; stir until butter has melted. In a small bowl, beat the egg yolk slightly; gradually stir in a little of the hot chocolate mixture; stir back into chocolate mixture in double boiler. Cook over hot (not boiling) water, stirring constantly, until egg yolk thickens mixture—about 5 minutes.

Remove from heat and water. Stir in chocolate-mint cordial. Serve hot or cold with vanilla ice cream. Makes about 1 cup.

Boy Scouts hike over rugged trail

STROUDSBURG — The Pocono and Blue Mountain district boy scouts and their leader are recuperating and reminiscing about their 22-day expedition to Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico, where they spent 10 days on the trail walking, talking and learning and just having the time of their life.

Yes, the boys made it; it was exciting and it was an honor, as they came back to show off their Philmont patch to friends and parents.

The local scouts were among the 39 scouts from three districts, including the Paxinos district to start a five day bus tour to Philmont on June 22. They represented the Delaware Valley Area Council.

After being inspired by the Philmont Story, the 39 Scouts were assigned the 627-C Expedition, split into three groups and on their own for 10 days, hiking and camping, climbing mountains, wading rivers and tromping through the woods in the scout reservation to the northeast of Cimarron.

Clair Wallingford, leader for the 13 local scouts recalled some rough hikes along the trail which was 7,000 feet above sea level.

"The air gets kind of thin once you start climbing," Wallingford said. "Old Baldy was the toughest, but the boys were proud to make it to its 12,400 foot peak. It was really a climb, four or five miles up and back down. The boys even had a snowball fight up there."

"Not only that, it started hailing one afternoon with four inches of hail on the ground," Wallingford said.

The boys were on their own and while on the trail lived on a strict diet of dehydrated foods. Sometimes they liked it, most of the times they didn't. A trail breakfast packet consisted of hot cereal, melba toast, scrambled dried eggs with bac-o-chips, instant milk and sweet milk cocoa.

For lunch, there was peanut butter and jelly spread, graham crackers, fig bars, appleberry sauce and orange drink. They were nutritious but like boys were always hungry.

"The first day we had a six mile hike and a steep climb from Indian Canyon to Indian Writings Camp where we made an archaeological tour of the writings; the second day and another three miles to Camp Penit, where we constructed 'check dams' along the trail against water erosion as a conservation project.

Six of the boys got their National Rifle Association training the third day, a four hour course. They are: Robert Wallingford, Troop 85; Dean Hoke, Post 111; John Abruzzese, Troop 86; Marc Brown, Post 102; Donald Thompson, Post 36 and Charles Heard III, Post 102.

The following two days were spent panning for gold, touring an old mining town and rock formations with a geology lecture.

The boys got off the track a little on the five-mile-hike on the sixth day as they chased a giant porcupine returning with their trophy of quills.

The next two days were "dry camps" where the scouts were digging and studying fossils. The last camp and the last five miles were across the Cimarron River (Wallingford said the boys would call it a creek back home).

A good square meal and a real bed were waiting for the boys at the end of the trail at the main camp, but their greatest joy came during the final welfare campfire and awards ceremony at Philmont.

This was the moment the boys will remember and the leaders, too, who also were presented with a plaque, depicting a pair of torn and worn shoes.

The scouts had a few more treats on the return five day bus trip with stops at Ladunta, Colo., to see the Koshare Indian museum, sleeping in the "Kiva" arena; McConnell's Air Force Base in Kansas; Chennault AFB, Ill.; and Falling Rock Boy Scout Camp, Newark.

The other Scouts on the trip were David Hammond, Troop 86; Dan Ehrlich, Troop 81; Kirk Flanagan, Post 111; James Wyckoff, Post 111; Dale Cerino and David Feuerbach, Troop 41.

Fires make things hotter

STROUDSBURG — Firemen in Monroe County tried to keep things cool Tuesday when the temperature was near the 100 mark, but alarms prevented them from keeping the temperature down.

Acme Hose Co. firemen in East Stroudsburg were called out twice Tuesday.

The first alarm was at 11:45 a.m. when a safety valve on a water heater "blew" and filled the basement of the William Palmer home at 99 Burson Street with steam. Firemen's services were not required.

The second alarm sounded at 6 p.m. when a station wagon, owned by Pocono Highland Camp, Marshalls Creek, backfired through the carburetor and caught fire at the Dairy King on Millford Road.

Stroudsburg firemen were called to the home of Mrs. William L'Hommiedieu at 530 Main Street, where the oil burner "kicked in" and ignited, causing smoke to come from the chimney.

No service was required but William Schroeder, fire chief, said, "I'm glad there was no fire and I'm happy to know that someone is interested enough to make a call when they see smoke. It's better than coming when the entire building is engulfed in flames."

At 10:35 a.m., Barrett Twp. firemen were called to Rt. 380, about two miles north of Canadensis, when a Humble Oil Co. trailer loaded with lubricant caught fire.

Fire Chief Charles Ayers said fire was caused by a short circuit in the generator.

Then just as things were starting to return to a nice "cool" 90 degrees, Stroud Twp. firemen were called to Brushy Mountain Road for a car fire.

Meeting cancelled

STROUDSBURG — The Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County has rescheduled Tuesday's regular monthly meeting until next Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the authority office in East Stroudsburg.

Harley Fish Jr. of East Stroudsburg told Fire Chief Lester Rice he took the air cleaner off the carburetor of his car to make the engine run more smoothly. He started the car and it backfired through the carburetor and caught fire. Rice estimated damage to the car at $100.

'Show Boat' comes across strong

By PAT WILLIAMS
Record Reviewer

MOUNTAINHOME — The biggest opening night audience at Pocono Playhouse this season gave a warm welcome to Rowena Stevens' surprisingly good production of "Show Boat."

The smooth production with rapid scene changes was marred by only one slight mistake in setting, otherwise changes were quite slick. As to the musical talent of the stars, they can all sing more than adequately and project well to the rear of the theatre.

Captain Andy, played by Stanley Carlson, who is remembered from his tour of duty singing along with Mitch, brings his jovial personality to the fore and uses as a foil, Sybil Latham, as his poisonous-personalized wife. Some of the funniest business in the show is their responsibility and they really pull it off.

Nolan Van Way plays the handsome lead, Gaylord Ravenal. His lady-love is played by Joan Nelson as Magnolia. The two provide smooth harmony in the old standard, "Only Make Believe," and maintain the quality of their singing throughout the show.

Renee Guerin, as Julie, is a gem. She has a lovely smoky contralto voice that does justice to the haunting "Bill" and really belts out, "Can't Help Lovin' That Man."

Another comedy pair, who not only sing but dance, too, are Don Liberto and Norma Boggert. They really shine in, "Good Bye My Lady Love," which drew spontaneous applause.

Alice Webb is warm and funny and quite an addition to a strong cast.

"Old Man River" a song that calls for power and versatility, was turned in with both by Leonard Hayward. He has a fine range and rich timbre which is demanded by the song.

The quality of the production is above the average musical ordinarily done at the Playhouse. Voices blended well and were not flat.

Although the choreography Monday night did not match the calibre of the remainder of the production further work by the cast will develop the good points and give the chorus a chance to give the stars the support they deserve.

3,500 see horse show; ends tonight

STROUDSBURG — A "tremendous" crowd of some 3,500 persons packed the main bleachers at Stroudsburg High School Stadium and overflowed into the opposite field bleachers to view the second performance of Professor Ottomar Herrmann's Lipizzaner Stallions Tuesday night.

John Viechnicki, chairman of the project for the Pocono Mountain Jaycees, who are sponsoring the program, said one reason for the crowd was "the fact that the evening was beautiful."

Monday night's crowd, he said, was kept down because the weather threatened.

Viechnicki said there were people in the stands from as far away as Staten Island, N.Y., Harrisburg, all parts of New Jersey and across Pennsylvania.

The final performance of the famed white horses will be given tonight beginning at 8 p.m. in the stadium.

The finale of the performance was marred by a power failure, however. Shortly before the finish of the show, the lights flickered and then went out entirely.

One spectator attributed the relative calmness of the crowd during the blackout to the master of ceremonies, who kept up a stream of reassuring remarks.

Spectators were forced to leave the stadium in darkness.

Local health chapter ups membership

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Chapter for Retarded Children reports that its membership has increased for 1968 to 250 members, according to Mrs. Walter Strunk.

The local chapter also received information from the state association concerning the Pennhurst State School and Hospital, and the appointment of a fact-finding committee to investigate its inadequate services and conditions.

Harold Nathan, state president, said the committee is a step in the right direction but Governor Raymond Shafer has appointed no knowledgeable citizen outside his official family and that too many investigations have been completed already without action.

The state association and its local county chapters have expert consultants available in the field of mental retardation. We urge our State administration to accept and use this consultation, especially in planning new facilities and programs to serve the retarded, Nathan said.

"The society must also express concern by demanding that the Governor and legislative leaders appropriate sufficient funds and act administratively to eliminate the deplorable conditions," Nathan said.

Transferring 2,000 patients does not eliminate the problem, Nathan pointed out. Construction of new buildings that will take three years to complete will only add to the misery of those patients presently situated at Pennhurst.

Utility's plan opposed

League against Sunfish plan

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg-based Lenni Lenape League is "entirely opposed" to a plan by New Jersey utility companies to build a "middle reservoir" near Sunfish Pond.

This is according to Glenn Fisher, executive director of the league of conservationists who have fought to save the pond from hydroelectric development.

"We've been aware of this plan for some time," Fisher said, "but they will come so close to Sunfish Pond with this 'middle reservoir' that it would effect the water table and probably cause sedimentation."

The utility company plan, backed by New Jersey Governor Richard Hughes, calls for construction of a reservoir 1,000 feet from Sunfish Pond, between it and the Yards Creek Reservoir. The reservoir would eliminate the need for taking water from Sunfish Pond.

"The plan would effect the ecology of the area—the entire natural interaction of plant and animal life," Fisher said. "One thousand feet may seem like a lot, but it's not very far away when you're speaking of water. The pond is mostly stream-fed and that would be affected too."

Fisher said that his group was in favor of a plan to buy back Sun Fish Pond from the utilities company. The plan, introduced by Essex County Assemblyman Thomas H. Kean, passed the New Jersey assembly, this month but the state senate adjourned before taking action on it.

The Agriculture, Conservation and Economic Development Committee of the New Jersey Assembly and Senate will be conducting an inquiry regarding aspects of the sale of Sunfish Pond on July 24 in Trenton, he said, this caused the companies to bring it out.

"We feel, and I'm sure other conservation groups feel, that the plan is no good," Fisher said. "We're heading for the hearing, and we're urging people to testify regarding sale of the tract. The only way to preserve Sunfish Pond is to buy it back."

Fisher said he felt the power company compromise was a result of the New Jersey Assembly's action. Although the plan had been "in the mill," he said, this caused the

Fair time approaching

STROUDSBURG — While most county residents swelter in mid-summer doldrums almost feverish activity is taking place for the traditional fairs throughout the area.

Plans have already been announced for the popular Greene-Dreher-Sterling Fair in Newfoundland that is heading into the second half of a century of pleasing kids and grown-ups alike, largely due to the efforts of Carroll Fetherman, associated with the fair since 1938 and years before that as a performer.

The fair is one of the myriad annual shows throughout the county that feature, agricultural exhibits, home economics enteries, the annual 4-H projects, animal shows, prizes and mother's strawberry preserves.

The fair has drawn numerous bands and well-known entertainment throughout the years in addition to entertainment for youngsters in the form of carnival rides.

Another tradition in the fair circuit is Bangor's Blue Valley Fair now in its 23rd year in the Slate Belt.

The five-day fair will run from Aug. 20 through 24th on the Blue Valley Farm Show Grounds in Bangor.

Including carnival rides, industrial arts exhibits, home economics displays, cattle judging, pet parades, and musical entertainment, the fair is again expected to draw large crowds that have become standard in the Slate Belt for the annual summer's end event.

According to Mrs. William Brown, Bangor, and fair manager, this year will feature the same type of exhibits and entertainment that have been part of the show throughout the years and since she took charge of most of the fair production in 1967.

Mrs. Brown said, however, it was hoped that this year's crowds would be larger than this past seasons which were dampened by rainfall throughout most of the week.

The fair is under the sponsorship of the Bangor Exchange Club incorporated into the better known, Blue Valley Farm Show Inc.

"Each year the fair gets bigger," Mrs. Brown said and added that more than $2,500 in cash prizes were awarded last year.

Special events for this season's show were listed as, a pet parade at 6:30 Wednesday night when close to 200 entries vie for prizes in the event.

Also slated for opening night are Bozo the Clown for the kiddies and the American Federation of Musicians Bands, later in the night.

Thursday, features the Blue Valley Youth Band, and Friday the Nelson Lobb Post American Legion Band will play for fairgoers.

Final night activities and entertainment included the John N. Rothman Band, from Millerstown, and the popular Farm Show Queen coronation.

Presentation of awards will also take place on the final night of the fair.

One of the largest fairs is in the West End of Monroe County where the annual West End Fair is held in Gilbert.

Fair planners in the West End Fair Assn. annually release a "Fair booklet" announcing the attractions of the largely agricultural and home-economic oriented show.

According to fair officials the booklet is still being compiled with advertisements in the process of inclusion between the pages packed with data on the fair, entry requirements, and fair regulations.

Dates for the annual West End Fair have been set as Aug. 27 to 30.

22 Redmond Co. workers on strike

STROUDSBURG — 22 knitters and threaders walked off their jobs at the Redmond Finishing Company, East Stroudsburg at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday due to a wage dispute between the employees and the manager of Redmond, Allen Ginsberg of Stroudsburg, according to one of the striking employees who wished to remain anonymous.

"The knitters and threaders are asking for a 20 cent-per-hour raise," the employee said, "from $2.23 to $2.43 an hour."

He added that replacing knitters would be difficult as they are scarce in the labor market.

According to Mrs. Francis Smith, council secretary, a more than hour-long discussion was held during the special meeting but no official action or substantial recommendations were offered to cope with possible congestion.

She said that close to 20 of the 31 professional persons located on the avenue attended the meeting to talk about the often clogged road, across the bridge from Port Jervis.

Council president Robert H. Mager has said he was "aware" of the problem but offered no routes to a solution of the tie ups.

According to Mrs. Smith some suggestions that were made included restricted parking on a half hour basis and the possibility of opening a municipal parking lot.

She said that council has decided to study the situation further before setting policy or arriving at a recommendation.

No date has been set for next meeting of council, according to Mrs. Smith.

Yanks sweep Sens, 4-0, 4-3

NEW YORK (UPI)—Rocky Colavito celebrated his return to the American League with a three-run homer in the first game and Joe Pepitone slammed a two-run homer in the second game Tuesday night as the New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from the Washington Senators by 4-0 and 4-3 margins.

Colavito, a native of the Bronx who was finally signed by the Yankees Monday after being released by the Dodgers, hit his three-run homer to highlight a four-run fifth inning that gave Steve Barber the victory in the opener.

Colavito, who didn't play in the second game, started the opener in rightfield and collected the 37th homer of his career to tie Gil Hodges for 15th place in the all-time homer list. It came off loser Joe Coleman, now 5-11, following a single by Pepitone and a bunt single by Andy Kosco. Coleman then allowed the final run with Jake Gibbs, who singled and advanced on a foul pop and infield out, scored on a passed ball.

Barber, now 3-3, allowed 10 hits but walked just one and struck out three in the slugging 100-degree heat.

Pepitone's homer, his 11th of the season, came after a one-out single by Mickey Mantle in the sixth inning of the second game. It erased a 3-2 margin the Senators had taken with two runs in the top of the sixth.

The Senators, who have now

Bengtson happy with passing aspect of Packers' drill

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI)—Coach Phil Bengtson put his Green Bay Packers through a steamy 90 minute workout Tuesday and pronounced the exhibition "overall, satisfactory."

Bengtson, who succeeded Vince Lombardi as head coach earlier this year, said he was happy with the passing aspect of the drill, conducted as the mercury passed the 90 degree mark. He said it was "too early to tell yet about the first year men."

Fred Talbot then came in on relief and allowed just one hit in the final 3 2-3 innings to pick up his first win of the season against eight losses.

Washington starter and loser Dick Rosman, 0-6, then gave up the homer to Pepitone in the last of the sixth that decided the game.

Nelson Briles, Lou Brock pace Cards to 6-1 win

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Lou Brock collected three hits, stole three bases, drove in two runs and scored two runs to back the three-hit pitching of Nelson Briles Tuesday night and give the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals a 6-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Cardinals, who have won 13 of their last 14 games, maintained a lead of nine and one half games in the National League. The Cards knocked out San Francisco starter Ray Sadock in the two-run fifth inning and now have a record of 24-7 against left-handers.

Briles allowed a homer by Willie McCovey in the second and singles by Hal Lanier in the third and pinch hitter Ty Cline in the eighth. The victory was his third straight and lifted his record to 11-6.

San Francisco's Brock hit by a pitch in the first inning, stole second, went to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a single by Mike Shannon.

In the second, Brock singled to drive home two more runs. Brock then stole second and scored on a single by Curt Flood. Brock also singled in the fourth and sixth and stole his 23rd base of the season in the sixth. He has stolen 12 bases in the last eight games.

Phillies tie in 9th; bow to Cubs in 12th

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Glenn Beckert collected three hits—including a 12th inning double which scored pinch-runner Adolfo Phillips—to run his hitting streak to 21 straight games Tuesday night and give the Chicago Cubs a 4-3 victory over Philadelphia that snapped the Phils' seven-game winning streak.

Ken Holtzman had a 3-2 victory all but wrapped up when he struck out pinch-hitter John Callison for the second out of the ninth inning—but manager Leo Durocher decided to get cute and lift him in favor of Phil Regan. Cookie Rojas promptly singled off Regan to tie the game 3-3 and send it into extra innings.

It remained tied until the 12th. Al Spangler, batting for Regan, walked and moved to second when first baseman Johnny Briggs dropped a pickoff attempt by loser Gary Wagner, now 1-1. Beckert then doubled to score Phillips, who ran for Spangler.

Joe Nieko retired the side in the 12th to save the victory for Regan, who's 8-2.

Holtzman took a 3-1 lead into the ninth when Tony Taylor led off with a double. After Briggs grounded out, pinch-hitter Rick Joseph hit a fly that Jim Hickman got his glove on in right and dropped it for a two-base error that scored Taylor. After Callison struck out, Rojas singled off Regan to tie the game.

Phils' starter Chris Short didn't allow a hit until Jim Hickman opened the sixth with a triple. Holtzman doubled him in and Beckert singled in Holtzman.

Beckert singled, stole second and scored the Cubs' third run in the eighth on Ron Santo's two-out single.

Pirates end skid on double by May

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—The Pittsburgh Pirates snapped a 10-game losing streak Tuesday night when Jerry May doubled in two runs with two outs in the seventh inning to beat the New York Mets 3-2.

Losing pitcher Dick Selma was working on a three-hitter when Donn Clendenon walked with two out and Bill Mazeroski hit an infield bouncer that went for a single when shortstop Al Weis cut it off in front of second but couldn't throw him out. May then doubled to tie the game 2-2 and hand Selma his fourth loss against eight victories.

The Pirates scored their first run in the second. Roberto Clemente walked, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on Willie Stargell's fly to center and scored on Clendenon's sacrifice fly. It was the first Pirate victory at home since June 20th. The loss was the fifth in a row for the Mets, their longest of the season.

The Pirates' last win came on July 5 when Veale beat the Cubs 4-0.

January: chances same as last year

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—Don January, the methodical defending champion, said Tuesday he figures his chances of winning the 50th PGA championship "are every bit as good as they were for me winning the 49th."

January said, "I feel fine, my game is in good shape and my aching back has not ached in a long, long time now."

The tall Texan commented on his chances just prior to taking off on his first practice tour of the Pecan Valley Country Club course where competition starts Thursday.

"I do not know exactly what my chances are, but they are every bit as good as they were for me winning the 49th last year," January said.

January was not among the well-regarded contenders a year ago when the PGA was played at Columbine Country Club in Denver, but he put together rounds of 71-72-70-68 to tie fellow Texan Don Massengale for the title at 281 and then won the 18-hole playoff 69 to 71.

January would not attempt to forecast a winning score here, saying he was "the world's worst handicapper."

"I thought a 280 would win at Milwaukee, but young Dave Stockton comes along and shoots a 275, even old Sammy (Sneed) had a 278 for second," January said. "I did not even make the cut."

The 39-year-old January, who has won the Tournament of Champions and is among the top dozen money winners this year, was referring to Stockton among others when he commented "This game is not what it used to be...these youngsters are making it double tough."

"Us oldtimers used to just try and make a living, hoping for the birdies it took to win, but accepting the pars and picking up our money."

"But now," he said, "there are so many young bucks out here who take out all the stops and run at it. They go for birdies or eagles on every hole. They do not know how to play layup. And, there is enough of them doing that so one or more of them are knocking at the top at every tournament."

January was stationed at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio in the 1950s, but said he did not play Pecan Valley then.

"It was not even here," he said of the six-year-old, 7,096-yard, par 35-35-70 course which was carved out of a veritable brush jungle along the usually docile Salado Creek.

"I have played it a few times—in fact I played 16 holes here two months ago with Texas Gov. John Connally and pro Miller Barber," he said. "It was pretty tough then, but they had not begun to let the rough grow."

"I have not played it competitively in several years since the Texas PGA sectional but I played reasonably well then."

January had a lot of company at practice Tuesday, although one of the game's big names, Arnold Palmer, took time out to jet to Vail, Colo., for a youth golf clinic and planned to fly back in time to take another whirl before sundown.

Palmer wants very badly to win this one, "the only major title which has eluded him."

Jack Nicklaus, a 3-1 co-favorite along with Billy Casper, flew in from the British Open in the early afternoon and immediately headed for the practice tee and then his first look over at the course.

Bright sunshine and temperatures in the 90s continued to prevail but the gusty winds which had bothered the early arrivals had subsided.

Abe Pollin denies sale of Bullets

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Abe Pollin, president and one-third owner of the Baltimore Bullets, said Tuesday he is negotiating to buy out his partners.

Pollin denied reports that the sale of the NBA franchise had already been consummated.

"There are negotiations going on," Pollin said, "but nothing has been finalized. As of this moment, the report of the sale is not true."

Pollin said that of the three partners, he was the most likely to buy out the other two. Pollin, who lives in Bethesda, Md., and the team's secretary-treasurer, Arnie Heft of Silver Spring, Md., are both builders in the Washington, D.C., area.

Earl Foreman, the Bullets' vice president, is a Washington lawyer, a minority owner of the Philadelphia Eagles, and the majority owner of the Washington Whips soccer club.

The three owners, tied to major business interests in the Washington area, have found it increasingly difficult to run the team since the death last fall of Heft's brother, Herb, at 42. Herb Heft was the executive-vice president and ran the front office.

Reports that the Bullets would be moved ended when a deal to sell the club to Ben Kerner and move it to Miami fell through. Shortly afterwards, the Bullets signed a three year contract with the Baltimore Civic Center.

Rookie Earl Monroe, whose 30-points-per game scoring performances drew record crowds to the Civic Center last winter, was credited with helping keep the franchise in Baltimore.

Pollin is reported to be in a better financial position to take control of the club. Earlier this year, Heft indicated an interest in selling out.

Much of Foreman's capital is tied up in the Eagles. The National Football League club is in a legal net surrounding the majority stockholder, Jerry Wolman, who is trying to extricate himself from more than 250 creditors and $71.9 million in debts.

The three owners bought the Bullets four years ago for $1.5 million.

Special, open letter

All right, Miss Stevens, take an open letter to General William D. Eckert. Who is he? Well, he helps Joe Reichler run baseball.

Slug it "Dear Commissioner."

"I am going to talk to you today about a subject I don't know how familiar you are with—baseball."

"Commissioner, when I tell you your recent 'All-Star' game in Houston had all the thrills of a sorority pillow fight, I am giving the game all the best of it. It was like paying to watch guys wind clocks."

"Like I say, Commissioner, I don't know how familiar you are with the grand old game and I don't want to interfere with your plans for the summer, but when you got 25 or 30 of the greatest players in the game and it is won by a double-play ball, the next sound you hear may be a death rattle."

"Now, don't tell me ALL those pitchers were Christy Mathewson. And don't try to tell me some of those batters couldn't hit soap bubbles in three swings. Mays, Aaron and Mantle represent 1,500 home runs among them."

"Your trouble is not at the plate but behind it. That's right—the umpires. And the rules that guide them."

"Let us go back a few years to when the Dodgers were getting ready to open Chavez Ravine. Up to then, the batter had not become as extinct as the great plains bison, but on canvassing its potential, the Dodgers began the first great slaughter of the herd. The Dodgers, you see, had extraordinary pitching and even more extraordinary speed. Ergo, Walter O'Malley had to fight himself not to put the centerfield fences in Altadena. As it was, he stopped them just short of Pasadena City Hall."

"Then he made the infield so hard a guy could break 10 seconds in the hundred on crutches. Dodger Stadium became the citadel of the shutout, the scoreboard looked like a doughnut rack night after night."

"Dodger Stadium also became the home of the National League pennant and world championship. The lesson was not lost on baseball. Pennants are won by airport outfields, speed and hit-and-running. The new parks springing up had to put in autos to haul the pitchers from the outfield bulge because they were a sleeper jump from the mound."

"Then, mysteriously, in the winter of 1962 or maybe '63, the strike zone was widened. This accounted in turn for the overnight disappearance of the unintentional base-on-balls. Tell me, Commissioner, how long has it been since you saw a pitcher get WILD? I mean, REALLY wild, like they used to in the old days where the crowds would chant 'Pitcher's in the air. Catcher needs a high chair?' Not in a long time. Commissioner, kids come in the league today who don't even own a razor and they throw strikes. With the count 3-and-2 yet!

"Now, I submit, that's unnatural. The hitter now knows that he must hit anything that doesn't hit him first. Any pitch that misses you is a strike nowadays. Commissioner, do you realize there have been 50 strikeouts in the last two All-Star games?!"

"Commissioner, why wouldn't the kids throw strikes? They know there are only about four musclemen in each league who have the left to drive the ball out of parks so big you half expect to see bears begging for food in them. And even the muscle types have to hit the ball right where it says 'Hillerich.' Otherwise, it's just the might's highest pop fly."

"All right, Commissioner, so now the hitter has the base-on-balls taken from him. Also, the home run. What's left? Blindfold him? A ball game today must look to a foreigner like two guys having a catch while a third guy stands there with a club on his shoulder watching."

"Even existing ballpark are not exempted from the conspiracy of silence you can't even HEAR a game anymore. In Cleveland, they quietly moved the fences out to the shores of Lake Erie over the winter because, like everyone else in this era of the noiseless game, they have more pitchers than hitters."

"Commissioner, the great lore of baseball is the crack of the bat, the sound of a ball hitting a fence. It has been replaced by the smack of the catcher's mitt."

"Suggestions have come from all quarters. Move the pitcher's mound back, some say. I would say, don't move the pitcher's mound back, move the fences in. Strive for the strike zone back to stretch only from the letters down, not from the eyes down, as some umps seem to interpret it. Bring back the base-on-balls. It's not exciting in and of itself but when it comes in clusters and the home crowd suddenly has 50,000 lumps in its throat, it can make the game very exciting indeed."

Ex-Pony League pitchers take over

"The great All-Star games were 9-7, 11-9, or 6-5. The Musicals, the Williamses, the Mayases, Aarons, Ruths and Gehrigs performed their specialty. When Hubbell struck out 5 Hall-of-Famers in a row in 1934 (in a 9-7 game) it was hailed as an extraordinary feat because not every pitcher in the game did it. Now kids two years out of Pony League do it. Get a lump back in the pitcher's throat. Make him work for his out. Don't let him go up to the batters before the game and say 'Why don't you just sign for your three strikeouts and one pop-up right now and save us all the bother of playing this bore out to the finish?' It will do wonders for a hitter's morale to know that he only has to swing on pitches right in his wheelhouse."

"Many years ago on the old banquet circuit, Knute Rockne used to tell of the time he kept tackling Jim Thorpe at the line of scrimmage. Thorpe reproached him with 'Son, don't you know all these folks came out to see old Jim run? Why don't you let this old Indian run?' Rock ignored him—and one time, Thorpe came at him with a devastating straight arm and a smashing hip jar which flattened him. When Rock came to, Thorpe was trotting back from the end zone and he helped his erstwhile tormentor up. 'Now,' he said, 'see how happy the folks are when you let old Jim run?'"

"I think you have to let old Mick hit to keep the folks happy. Or old Will. Or Big Frank. This other game is like listening to a troubadour without strings, an orchestra without instruments, a singer with the sound off. The folks want pandemonium, not pantomime. Commissioner. Let's put the sound back in baseball. That way, when someone asked you whatever became of baseball, you won't have to say 'Well, in a manner of speaking, it struck out.'"

Two positions open for rifle team

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—The battle for the two remaining positions on the U. S. Olympic shooting team begins Wednesday at Camp Bowie with nearly 80 of the country's top rifle experts competing.

Lt. Gary Anderson, a National Guard officer from San Anselmo, Calif., is the defending champion in the international free rifle match, which consists of 120 shots fired from three positions.

Marksmen fire 40 shots from the kneeling, prone and standing positions at a target 300 meters away.

Anderson, seeking his third consecutive national title, holds the match record with 3,473 out of a possible 3,600. He posted that score when he won the match at Ft. Benning, Ga., last year.

Marine S. Sgt. Francis Higginson of Quantico, Va., is the defending centerfire champion but Army Sgt. Major William B. Blankenship Jr. of Richlands, Va., was expected to provide a strong challenge.

4 rookies quit Cards

LAKE FOREST, ILL. (UPI)—Veteran players began to pour into the training camp of the St. Louis Football Cardinals Tuesday.

Many of the players had remained at their homes pending settlement of the proposed players' strike in the National Football League. Some were still on the way to camp and were expected to arrive Wednesday.

Head coach Charley Winner held two conditioning drills in the 90-degree heat. Returning veterans who took part included defensive end Dave Long, flanker Dick Sorkorn, defensive back Mike Barnes, linebackers Mike Strofolino and Jerry Hillebrand and quarterbacks Tim Van Galder and Vidal Carlin. Ernie Clark, veteran linebacker acquired from the Detroit Lions in a trade for defensive end Joe Robb, also took part in the session.

Four rookies left camp. Linebackers Dan Lankas of Kansas State and Larry Matthews of Middle Tennessee and running back Charles Wilson of Baylor told the Cardinals they were leaving.

IL names nine to All-Stars

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UPI)—Nine additional players were named Tuesday to round out the International League squad for next Monday night's All-Star game in Louisville.

IL President George Sisler announced the names of the nine players, plus two additional men to fill vacancies caused by two All-Stars who won't be able to play in the game against the Cincinnati Reds because of prior military commitments.

Named to the IL team Tuesday were: infielders Dave Campbell of Toledo and Rick Hebner of Columbus; outfielders Tom Reynolds of Jacksonville and George Thomas of Louisville; catcher Ellie Rodriguez of Syracuse and pitchers Steve Jones of Buffalo, Dick Drago of Toledo, John Gohar of Columbus and Rick Delgado of Rochester.

Also named to replace Hebner and first baseman Mike Hegan of Syracuse, who will both be on active duty by game time, were shortstop John Kennedy of Columbus and pitcher Jim Roeder of Toledo.

Players named to the team last Saturday night were: pitchers Dave Roberts of Columbus and Galen Cisco of Louisville; catcher Gerry Moses of Louisville; infielders Bob Chance of Buffalo, Chuck Harrison of Richmond, Hegan, Syd O'Brien of Louisville, and outfielders Amos Otis of Jacksonville, Larry Stahl of Jacksonville, Brant Alyea of Buffalo, Merv Rettenmund of Rochester and Bob Christian of Toledo.

Coaches for the All-Stars will be Clyde McCullough of Jacksonville and Eddie Kasco of Louisville.

Red leaders reassure Czechs

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist leaders of the Soviet Union and four of its East European allies wound up a summit meeting here Monday by drafting a letter to their Czechoslovak counterparts, whose liberal movement has caused them concern.

The official Polish Press Agency announced formulation of the letter to Prague without disclosing what it said.

However the participants— from the Soviet Union, Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary and East Germany—had publicly expressed fear that the Czechoslovak party leadership was losing control of the democratization process.

Coinciding with the end of the summit meeting was a report from Prague that units of the Soviet armed forces involved in Warsaw Pact maneuvers in Czechoslovakia last month resumed their departure during the night for East Germany and Poland.

The continued presence of these troops—part of 5,000 Russians committed to the maneuvers—had caused concern among some Czechoslovaks. The troops began leaving Saturday, but then the movement halted. Official Czechoslovak news media said the interruption came because of heavy weekend traffic. But the delay was considered a new pressure on the new leadership in Prague.

In this connection Maj. Gen. Vaclav Pechlik, a top Czechoslovak defense official, was quoted as saying in a Prague news conference restricted to Czechoslovak journalists that his country will seek a revision of the Warsaw Pact that would prevent members from forming blocs within the alliance.

Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin sat through the Warsaw conference, which was originally expected to end Sunday.

A communique released by the Polish Press Agency said the delegates exchanged information "on the situation in their countries and the development of events in Czechoslovakia and directed a common letter to the Central Committee of the Communist party of Czechoslovakia."

Although there were no details given on the "common letter," one Communist source said it may contain a joint request for the removal of the most liberal elements in the Czechoslovak leadership.

Border spots still closed

BERLIN (AP) — West Germans with short memories and no passports were turned back at East German border crossing points today by Communist authorities.

Otherwise, traffic on the vital road links to and from West Berlin was reported normal.

Monday was the cutoff date set by the East Germans for West Germans wanting to set foot on East German territory to have valid passports. They are needed so that the East Germans can stamp their hammer and compass emblem inside as part of their visas.

A spokesman at the West German Heimstedt crossing point said 85 West Germans had been turned back by East German border guards, mostly in the early morning hours. Later on, Western officers advised those without passports not to try to cross.

The spokesman said that most of the West Germans involved had either forgotten the cutoff date or thought it included Monday. Those turned back took it more or less quietly, he added.

No figures were available for other West German border points. In West Berlin, a spokesman said it could not be determined how many were turned back since such returnees were mixed in with normally arriving travelers.

The passport regulation and accompanying visa fees are part of travel restrictions announced by the East Germans in June.
